1. Motivation behind Research Paper

We know lots of workers lost their jobs after the outbreak of Covid-19. The number of long-term unemployed people (people who had no jobs for more than a year), and totally unemployed people (people who don't have the will to work) are rising every year. However, we can't say they are getting the help they need for themselves and their families. I had questions about why they weren't able to get the help they desperately needed. I researched this topic to find out why they couldn't get help, and how to help them.

2. Introduction

The aim is to raise awareness about the unemployed and to find out how we can help them. From the research from the Ministry of Internal Affairs and Communications of Japan, it was found that Japan's full unemployment rate is about 2.4 percent, meaning that there are 1.75 million people who are unemployed.

3. Results and Analysis

I conducted research into the motivation behind unemployment and how to help them. The first is the unemployment subsidy system. This is a system that provides a certain amount of living expenses for unemployed people until they get a job. With this subsidy, job seekers will be able to live without suffering from living expenses and have a strong will to make efforts without giving up on employment.

The second is the employment support system. The employment support system is a system that introduces people who are unemployed and helps them to find places where they can work. With this system, you can find a job that suits them. In addition, you can get a lot of information and look for a job, and above all, you can help overcome the helplessness and fear of finding a job all by yourself. These two methods are already precedent-setting, and I think the most appropriate legislation would be the unemployment assistance from Germany.

4. Conclusion and Future Problems

As you can see, it takes a lot of effort to make the unemployed into employees. The two systems, the unemployed subsidy system and the employment support system are must-do tasks to reach employment. There is already appropriate legislation precedent-setting in Germany, but we will have to reform it so that it would fit into Japanese systems. Of course, continuing improvements will also be needed. Some unemployed people could abuse this system by only taking the subsidy, but not working. This system operates by taxes, so we have to prevent these abusers from taking the subsidy which was made for the people who actually want to work.

5. Reflection

In Korea, many young people are in pain because they cannot find jobs. I wanted to find out if Japan has the same problem. I found out Japan wasn't as serious as Korea, but I also found out that Japan deliberately did not include many unemployed people into their statistics. I found out that you should always think twice before just believing what they show you.
